
Move over, The Core

Posted by Ginger Yellow - 24-04-2008 12:38

This miniseries sounds like a scientific clusterfuck.

Budgeted at $13 million, the effects-heavy "Impact" chronicles the aftermath of a meteor shower during which a piece of a dwarf star lodges itself in the moon. That triggers a series of anomalies on Earth, including cell phone service interruption, exaggerated tides and the occurrence of sporadic weightlessness.

Astrophysicist Alex Kinter (Elliott), with a help of a female astronomer, discover that the moon has been dislodged from its orbit and is on a collision course with Earth.

Seriously, what the fuck?

=====

Re:Move over, The Core

Posted by hobbess - 24-04-2008 12:50

Hahaha. Where to start eh? Still this is the country that invented Intelligent Design, so.

=====

Re:Move over, The Core

Posted by Ginger Yellow - 24-04-2008 12:58

It's being made in Canada.

=====

Re:Move over, The Core

Posted by Antonio Gramsci - 24-04-2008 15:40

Can't possibly be as bad as Earth Storm (starring Stephen Baldwin!)

=====

Re:Move over, The Core

Posted by hobbess - 24-04-2008 16:16

Oh man, that was on Sci Fi channel last night. Taking a cue from WE's quality judgement policy I flicked over after 30 seconds.

=====

Re:Move over, The Core

Posted by Raskolnikov - 27-04-2008 16:41

A warning for channel-surfers: The Core is on Film4 this afternoon; half-six, I think.

=====