

---

Czech, Czech, Czech, Czech it out!

Posted by Harry Parsons - 09-05-2008 14:11

---

Based on my having a Czech sister-in-law and nephew, they're my pick for the Group A/B side of the draw.

Oh, hang on, they really fucked me off by having the tannoy man orchestrate their supporters during the qualifying game in Teplice in so doing breaking FIFA/UEFA rules.

Hmmm, on balance I'll stick with them as that was a great trip.

---

Re:Czech, Czech, Czech, Czech it out!

Posted by Wyatt Earp - 09-05-2008 14:54

---

Amazing country as well.

---

Re:Czech, Czech, Czech, Czech it out!

Posted by Purves Grundy - 09-05-2008 15:41

---

Yeah, I'll be doing my usual Czigga thing again this time.

---

Re:Czech, Czech, Czech, Czech it out!

Posted by And I am the Life - 09-05-2008 15:59

---

they'll be doing well to get out of their group. Having watched them in the qualifiers, They are a very poor team indeed.

They're the football equivalent of that woman who was in the supremes in the 1970's travelling around singing baby love with her mates and calling themselves the supremes.

---

Re:Czech, Czech, Czech, Czech it out!

Posted by Gangster Octopus - 09-05-2008 16:01

---

The post-Ross Supremes made some fabulous singles. Is that what you're trying to say?

---

Re:Czech, Czech, Czech, Czech it out!

Posted by Harry Parsons - 09-05-2008 16:04

---

I think he's saying they're Sylvester McCoy to the 96 and '04 sides' Jon Pertwee and Tom Baker.

---

Re:Czech, Czech, Czech, Czech it out!

Posted by And I am the Life - 09-05-2008 16:05

---

no, I'm talking about the "sounds of the supremes" who are playing a concert in dublin tonight I think. There is a woman in it who was tangentially involved in the band, and they're using the name, but it's not really the same is it?

If the games between the czech republic and Ireland are anything to go by, the czechs are not going to do very well at all.

---

