Any announced yet? What is the deadline? I may as well update PES 2008 in readiness.

Have you seen the numbering on Holland's shirts, Harry? (see the advert on page 16 of the current WSC)

Thoughts?

The deadline is apparently May 28th. I get very excited by squad lists and squad numbers. More than is healthy. I like the way different nations have recognisably different systems of doing it, too - for example the tendency of French first-choice goalkeepers to wear 16.

Like I said, I'm sad.

Oh for fuck's sake it's the over-sized Fuzzy Felt font again.

It's pretty big, but I like the square number 9 with a straight, um, tail. Adidas need to sort their numbering out too - what's with the four stripes? I think it was Spearmint Rhino who likened their numbers to the kind of marks you can make by dragging your fork through mashed potato.

Croatia's provisional squad (from www.hns-cff.hr)

Goalkeepers; Stipe Pletikosa (Spartak), Vedran Runje (Lens), Mario Galinovic (Panathinaikos)

Defenders; Robert Kovac (Borussia D.), Josip Simunic (Hertha), Dario Simic (Milan), Dario Knezevic (Livorno), Hrvoje Vujic (Tom), Vedran Corluka (Manchester City), Danijel Pranjinic (Heerenveen), Darijo Srna (Shakhtar D.)

Midfielders; Niko Kovac (Salzburg), Jerko Leko (Monaco), Niko Kranjcar (Portsmouth), Luka Modric (Dinamo Zagreb),

Nikola Pokrivac (Monaco), Ognjen Vukojevic (Dinamo Zagreb), Ivan Rakitic (Schalke 04), Mladen Petric (Borussia D.) forwards; Igor Budan (Parma), Ivica Olic (HSV), Ivan Klasnic (Werder), Nikola Kalinic (Hajduk S.)

On stand by
Manuel Pamic (Salzburg), Anas Sharbini (Rijeka)

Er, the Adidas numbers on that ad are solid and not composed of 3 or 4 stripes.

Anyway, can our correspondents across the world post up any of the squads and squad numbers as they are released here please? Edit: good man, Rowdy.

Re:Squads and squad numbers

Bugger, so they are. I based my concerns on the fact that at lunchtime I saw a kid in Wandsworth wearing a new France shirt with Henry 14 on the back with the mashed potato/fork font. I should have known better.

The Croatians haven't released any numbers yet as far as I can see. With the season not quite yet over, final squads won't be released for another few weeks.

The fact that Henry wears 12 for France is the giveaway.

Yes Rowdy, I think we might have to wait for UEFA's list after the deadline for most if not all squad numbers.

Speaking of Henry's number 12 shirt - what's the official rule on "squad number" style numbering outside of international tournaments?

The majority of European teams I see do it for friendlies and qualifying games, and it's been this way for a while - I recall seeing Zidane wearing his 21 shirt in a friendly and feeling dirty (yet aroused) by the whole prospect. Is it just the home nations flying the flag for 1-11 numbering outside of tournament play?

Re:Squads and squad numbers

Posted by Harry Parsons - 09-05-2008 16:57

I thought Zidane was always 10 for France, in tournaments or qualifiers, and only wore 21 at Juve because someone (Del Piero?) wouldn't relinquish it?

I am (unsurprisingly given my obsession with him) fascinated by what number Anelka will wear.

Re:Squads and squad numbers

Posted by dotmund - 09-05-2008 17:01

I'd guess he'll go for 3 or 9 and then add the second digit in with a clever mix of coal dust and vaseline.

Portugal's on Monday.

It's a shame that FC Porto's Kazmierczak isn't in that Poland squad - a very strong midfielder with a cracking shot and a good header of the ball, attacking and defending. Didn't get much of a look-in at club level this season, thus, I suppose, his exclusion.

I'm not sure there is an official rule. When Wales played in Frankfurt at the end of qualification for Euro 2008 Germany had a few players with squad numbers in the 30s.

Dirty.

I read an interview recently where Anelka said the number 39 "meant nothing". He wore number 9 at Euro 2000, I expect he'll use that number with France this summer.

Austria are crap, likely the worst side ever to participate in the final stages of this tournament. And yet they somehow built a 3-0 lead against the Oranje a month ago, which is one of the many things that worries those of us who support Holland.

Some further updates: Clarence Seedorf has pulled out of the Dutch squad, due to his continuing quarrel with Marco van Basten, the German squad will be announced on Friday, the French will announce a 29-man squad on the 25th, and the Croatian team have apparently been allocated numbers.

Posted by ursus arctos - 14-05-2008 21:00

The story apparently is that Seedorf was only going if he was going to start, and MvB wasn't willing to guarantee him a starting place. It wouldn't be the Oranje without at least headstrong personality clash that weakens the squad going into a major tournament. Seedorf is by no means an OTF favourite, but he has been one of Milan's best players this year.

Re:Squads and squad numbers

Posted by rowdy elements - 16-05-2008 16:40

The German squad announced today is actually a preliminary squad of 26, rather than the final squad promised. Newly promoted Borussia Mönchengladbach and Köln are represented in the squad, with Oliver Neuville, Marko Marin (19 year old left winger, 30 games, 13 assists this season for BMG) and Patrick Helmes. No place for Timo Hildebrand; possibly a mirror of the situation with Seedorf?

Das Team: www.dfb.de

Goalkeepers; Lehmann, Enke, Adler.

Defenders; Mertesacker, Metzelder, Westermann, Friedrich, Jansen, Lahm.

Midfielders; Fritz, Borowski, Frings, Hitzlsperger, Schweinsteiger, Ballack, Rolfes, Jones, Odonkor, Trochowski, Marin

Forwards; Neuville, Helmes, Podolski, Kuranyi, Gomez, Klose.

Marco van Basten has announced the first cut of his squad (of his own choice); Maduro, Emanuelson, Jaliens and Koevermans have all been eliminated from the original selection.

Spain, due to announce a squad yesterday have postponed their announcement until tomorrow as a mark of respect to their chief doctor, Genaro Borrás, who died yesterday, after a long battle with cancer.

Re:Squads and squad numbers

Posted by Lodzubelieveit - 17-05-2008 12:35

Spain's squad has just been announced. No Raul, as expected.

GK: Casillas, Palop, Reina

D: Albiol, Arbeloa, Capdevila, Juanito, Marchena, Fernando Navarro, Puyol, Ramos

M: Alonso, Cazorla, Cesc, De la Red, Iniesta, Senna, Silva, Xavi

F: Guiza, Sergio Garcia, Torres, Villa

5 players who have never played a minute for Spain (Palop, Navarro, De la Red, Cazorla, Sergio Garcia) seems to be rather a lot.

Spain will be quite good, but will ultimately be caught out in quarter- or semi-finals, principally because of their rash and slightly dodgy defence.

To follow up rowdy's previous post on Romania, here is the preliminary squad with current clubs:

Players based outside Romania - joining the squad this week:

Cosmin Contra (Getafe CF), Gabriel Tama_ (AJ Auxerre), ^tefan Radu (SS Lazio), R zvan Rac (FC ^ahtior Doneck), Florentin Petre (TSKA Sofia), Paul Codrea (AC Siena), R zvan Coci_ (FC Lokomotiv Moscova), Cristian Chivu

(Internazionale Milano FC), Adrian Mutu (Forentina), Ciprian Marica (VfB Stuttgart), Daniel Niculae (AJ Auxerre) _i Marius Niculae (Inverness).

Romania based players:

Bogdan Lobonc (FC Dinamo Bucure_ti), D nuc Coman (FC Rapid Bucure_ti), Marius Popa (FC Politehnica 1921 ^tiinca Timi_oara), Cristian S punaru (FC Rapid), Dorin Goian, Sorin Ghionea (ambii, FC Steaua), Cosmin Moci (FC Dinamo), Mirel R doi, Ovidiu Petre, Nicolae Dic , B nel Nicolic (toci, FC Steaua), Adrian Cristea, Florin Bratu (ambii, FC Dinamo) _i Ciprian Deac (CFR 1907 Cluj).

As Deac is one of the three players likely to be cut from the final squad, that means the league champions (and cup winners) will not have a single representative in the squad.

Re:Squads and squad numbers

Posted by ad hoc - 20-05-2008 10:21

Yes, and yes. The goalkeeping slot and the midfield are likely to be the seriously weak areas (indeed Piturca generally plays Chivu in midfield to shore that up a bit since he has a fair few defenders to choose from.)

Re:Squads and squad numbers

Mancini was doing the same at Inter in the wake of the rash of injuries in his midfield, though as we've discussed before,
Chivu was not at his best this year no matter where he played.

Romania's real problem is their group, I'm afraid.

Strange things going on down here.

Donadoni was expected to name his "pre-selection" of 28 today, but has instead named just 24 players (i.e., one more than the Euro limit). And he's included Cassano among the 24 (the other surprise being Montolivio of Fiorentina). Here is the complete list:

Goalkeepers: Buffon, Amelia, De Sanctis

Defenders: Barzagli, Cannavaro, Chiellini, Grosso, Materazzi, Panucci, Zambrotta.

Midfielders: Ambrosini, Gattuso, Aquilani, Camoranesi, De Rossi, Perrotta, Montolivo e Pirlo

Forwards: Toni, Borriello, Del Piero, Di Natale, Quagliarella, Cassano.

Re:Squads and squad numbers

Well, they did it once already . . .

Though it isn't at all hard to see a team with Materazzi, Cassano and De Rossi finishing a match against Germany with less than 11 players.

Re:Squads and squad numbers

Posted by Kurt Mondschein - 20-05-2008 14:52

They'd have an easy job in provoking Kuranyi and Podolski. Frings would be a good target too.

Re:Squads and squad numbers

And that's before we get to Herr Jones or Senor Camoranesi . . .

It could be the first final to finish with 16 players.

I'd just like to point out that the Czech squad that rowdy posted up last week is only provisional. Bruckner might make changes yet.

One has switched. Daniel Pudil (who was only in in the first place because Radek Sirl isn't fully fit) has dropped out. Rudi Skacel has been called up as a replacement.

I never thought I'd see the day, but Italy are really, really struggling for goalkeepers there (Buffon apart, of course).

Has Morgan De Sanctis ever been a first-choice keeper? He seems to have spent his entire career as back-up to the likes of Peruzzi, Buffon and Palop.

De Sanctis was first choice at Udinese for several seasons. And Amelia isn't terrible. But yeah, you are seeing the results of the relative domination of foreign keepers in Serie A (Buffon apart, of course).

Italy would naturalise Frey or Julio Cesar in a second if they could (and would consider doing the same for Doni, if not Dida or Kalac).

I'd just like to point out that the Czech squad that rowdy posted up last week is only provisional.

Of course, this is a caveat which applies to each squad, any changes must be made before tomorrow.

Landzaat and Boschker have been eliminated from the Dutch squad, Deac has been confirmed as one of the Romanian squad not to make the final 23, in addition to Danut Coman, Ovidiu Petre is also out of the competition injured, Pavlenko and Ivanov are out of Russia's squad leaving them with a final 23, Turkey's right-back Gökhan Gönül misses the tournament as well and for Switzerland there were a few changes to the original list; Coltorti is replaced by Eldin Jakupovic of Grasshopper, while Steve von Bergen and Blaise Nkufo are also out through injury. 33 year-old Thomas Häberli of Young Boys has been called up to replace Nkufo.

Everyone here assumes that Montolivo will be the "24th man" left home tomorrow, now that Perotta has overcome the knock he got in the Cup Final and Cassano has been on his best behaviour.

If you can get odds of 100 to 1 on Cassano being top scorer, I'd take them.

Re:Squads and squad numbers

There's less than an hour to go before each coach has to submit his final choice. Bratu has been cut from the Romanian squad, Marin has unsurprisingly made way from the final German squad, as Ursus said, Montolivo has been dropped from the Italian selection and Poland have finalised their team; Grzegorz Bronowicki, Radoslaw Majewski and Radoslaw Matusiak fail to make the cut from the provisional squad.

Time's almost up for squads to be revealed; France have announced theirs;

Goalkeepers: Coupet, Frey, Mandanda

Defenders: Sagnol, Clerc, Evra, Thuram, Abidal, Gallas, Boumsong, Squillaci

Midfield: Diarra, Vieira, Toulalan, Makélélé, Nasri, Ribéry, Govou, Malouda

Forwards: Henry, Benzema, Anelka, Gomis

For France, Mandanda has been selected in preference to Landreau, yesterday's performance from Bafétimbi Gomis puts him in the squad instead of Djibril Cissé, Makélélé and Toulalan are selected over Flamini and Escudé misses out with Boumsong in the squad.

With regards to the wikipedia link, there's a discrepancy in the Romania squad; Bratu is in their list in place of Moti. All the same, wikipedia does serve as a useful general introduction for those unfamiliar squad members.

Turkey's squad:

Goalkeepers: Volkan Demirel, Rustu Recber, Tolga Zengin

Defenders: Sabri Sarioglu, Gokhan Zan, Emre Asik, Servet Cetin, Hakan Kadir Balta, Ugur Boral, Emre Gungor

Midfield: Mehmet Aurelio, Mehmet Topal, Emre Belozoglou, Tumer Metin, Hamit Altintop, Ayhan Akman, Arda Turan, Tuncay Sanli, Kazim Kazim (Colin Kazim-Richards)

Forwards: Gokdeniz Karadeniz, Nihat Kahveci, Semih Senturk, Melvut Erdinc

No place then for Halil Altintop, Yildiray Basturk or Ibrahim Kas.

Re:Squads and squad numbers

No Basturk? Is he hurt again?

Re:Squads and squad numbers

Posted by rowdy elements - 28-05-2008 14:00

According to coach Fatih Terim, his injury record and the system Turkey will play were important factors in the decision to drop him.

I have a system in my mind for my team and unfortunately I concluded I couldn't name Yildiray in this ideal starting XI. He would be a substitute and that could affect his morale, so I decided to leave him out of our final squad.

It raises the question of whether the "German" Turks are again out of favour with the federation.

A slight trivia aside: who holds the UEFA record for most national team selections? Thuram, who holds that record for France, could surpass 150 by the end of this year.

And it looks like Casillas might break his record, he's already in the high 70s and just turned 27 last week...

Looking at some potential candidates with remarkably long international careers, Zoff has less than 120 azzuri selections, Yashine under 100. I thought those two might be closer to Thuram's amazing run.

Quite sadly this is something that I always find interesting. The numbers chosen for in international tournaments. Most countries choose the same three numbers tournament after tournament for goalkeepers.

Goalkeepers

1-16-23: Czech Republic

1-12-22: Portugal

1-18-21: Switzerland

1-12-23: Turkey

1-21-23: Austria

1-12-23: Croatia

1-12-23: Germany

1-12-22: Poland

1-16-23: France

1-14-17: Italy

1-13-16: Netherlands

1-12-23: Romania

1-12-13: Greece

1-12-16: Russia

1-13-23: Spain

1-12-13: Sweden

Sebastian Frey is number 16 for France which suggests that he is first choice as keeper now taken over from Fabian Barthez (another 16). Mandanda is "France's #1" despite being uncapped.

Anelka is wearing a number 39 shirt on his sticker in the Panini album. Quite disgusting really.

I notice that Del Piero is sticking with the number 7 shirt (despite Totti's international retirement). De Rossi is number 10.

The Observer's Euro 2008 this morning lists all squads and players' numbers and clubs. It ascribes 8 to Anelka also, Benzema is 9 as per Subside Sport's website a few weeks ago so they had a tip from Adidas, obviously.

Are numbers on shirts an anachronism at big tournaments like these, now that every player puts their name on the back of the shirt? They were only really ever there for the crowd, and commentators, to recognise which player was which, but with the names on shirts (and the ever-increasing celebrity status of the players themselves, anyway) it's not as if you need to know what number Ronaldo's playing in to spot him on the pitch.

For a while, numbers corresponded to playing positions (so the 11 on the pitch at kick-off would ALWAYS be numbered 1 to 11), but the Dutch started to rip that up with total football, and then squad numbers have just made it silly. Liverpool are as likely to have numbers 15 and 18 up front as 9 and 10.

I must say, as an American that grew up with sports where players picked whatever numbers they damn well pleased (starting lineup of numbers on the Lakers, the team that I loved more than any other as a kid: 33-42-45-4-32), I don't see the indignation with players picking numbers that don't correspond to their position. But that's just me.
