

---

The Derby

Posted by Mr Beast - 06-06-2008 10:22

---

Anyone interested?

Any tips appreciated

=====

Re:The Derby

Posted by Mr Beast - 06-06-2008 11:51

---

OK I get the message. No gamblers.

I will text Michael Owen and Paul Merson instead

=====

Re:The Derby

Posted by Rogin the Armchair Fan - 07-06-2008 04:50

---

We occasionally do get racing tip threads, but I think this is symptomatic of the fact that none of us have a bloody clue about this year's Derby.

I'm not sure enough to recommend money on it, but I'm fairly certain this year's will be won by a horse.

=====

Re:The Derby

Posted by Gangster Octopus - 07-06-2008 14:25

---

In the olden days I'd've run a sweep for this. Bit pointless when there's no-one else about...

=====

Re:The Derby

Posted by gt3 - 07-06-2008 14:43

---

I've put a fiver on Tartan Bearer

=====

Re:The Derby

Posted by King On The Rye - 07-06-2008 15:35

---

I don't mean to be a twat, but I backed the winner for a third year in a row.

=====

Re:The Derby

Posted by Impact Substitute - 07-06-2008 15:55

---

Made a great start to today's proceedings - I had the winner in the opening two races : Conduit & Smokey Storm. Had no joy in the next two races, so it came down to the Derby where I needed Casual Conquest to win so I could get a treble up.

However, it was an excellent race. Many of the leading contenders were well placed approaching the final few furlongs - At some point, Casual Conquest, Tartan Bear & Dr Fremantle all looked to have run the perfect race and were poised to prevail, but Kevin Manning guided New Approach through the field to get home. An excellent ride by Manning.

---

Before the race there was alot made of the decision to allow New Approach be 'accompanied' to the start. It was special treatment offered just to ensure the race started on time. The race began seven minutes late, though not due to New Approach. And this follows on from yesterdays Oaks which began almost a quarter of an hour late. I wonder how the organisers will explain it.

=====

Re:The Derby

Posted by Mr Beast - 09-06-2008 13:27

---

Agreed it was an excellent ride by Manning on New Approach. However I thought Ryan Moore gave Tartan Bearer a very weak ride.

No need to guess which I had my money on

=====