
Notes on the Khan fight

Posted by Izbušen dana Ples - 21-06-2008 22:06

The announcer is Stewpot out of Grange Hill (not a lookalike, it genuinely is)

If you are going to take on the name Gomez when you are Irish, don't wear a sombrero. You deserve to go down in the first.

Surely, I have missed another thread on this.

Re:Notes on the Khan fight

Posted by Izbušen dana Ples - 21-06-2008 22:20

Fucking ad breaks. I want to hear the talk in the corner.

Re:Notes on the Khan fight

Posted by wingco - 21-06-2008 22:25

Good fight. I'm glad Gomez did as well as he did. He has some story.

Re:Notes on the Khan fight

Posted by repeater - 21-06-2008 22:27

Sod the talk, I wanna see the ring girls. I don't know why, I'm generally disappointed when I do get to see them.

I couldn't believe it when I saw Mark Burdis announcing the fight, although in my case I only know him as "the bloke from Operation Good Guys".

Re:Notes on the Khan fight

Posted by Izbušen dana Ples - 21-06-2008 22:38

I've never seen this Bradley Price before, he's looking good

Re:Notes on the Khan fight

Posted by repeater - 21-06-2008 22:50

On that showing he did look pretty good, didn't he.

One of our midfielders was on the undercard, but it doesn't look like we'll get to see much of his fight, if any.

Re:Notes on the Khan fight

Posted by repeater - 21-06-2008 23:04

First round ko, then. Looked a bit soft but it would've put me down, that's for sure!

Well done, Curtis.

=====

Re:Notes on the Khan fight

Posted by Jorge Porbillas - 22-06-2008 11:54

Izbušen dana Ples wrote:

I've never seen this Bradley Price before, he's looking good

He was supposed to be on the Calzaghe v Hopkins undercard but didn't get a US visa due to an alcohol related indiscretion when he was younger.

=====