
100th Anniversary of Tunguska

Posted by WornOldMotorbike - 04-07-2008 15:10

We chatted about this 'incident' on the old board, but a 100th anniversary seems like a good time to mention it again. Fascinating, if you've never read about it before. Still fascinating if you have.

The story here.

And look at that. I finally figured out the link thing. Yay me.

Re:100th Anniversary of Tunguska

Posted by Spearmint Rhino - 04-07-2008 15:15

I love the whole Tunguska thing. Total wowness. (And it was the basis of one of the best episodes of The X Files.)

Re:100th Anniversary of Tunguska

Posted by SamLKelly - 04-07-2008 15:25

I only first heard about it in the papers a few days ago. Brilliant.

Re:100th Anniversary of Tunguska

Posted by The Chubby Cyclist - 04-07-2008 15:28

You've got to love CNN:

"There are many people who build their hypotheses based on scanty information," he told CNN.

Followed, 2 lines later, with

Sound off: What do you think caused blast?

Re:100th Anniversary of Tunguska

Posted by WornOldMotorbike - 04-07-2008 15:29

Don't feel bad. It was before you were born.

Re:100th Anniversary of Tunguska

Posted by hobbess - 04-07-2008 15:30

It was aliens what done it.

Them or Paul Heiney from That's Life.

Re:100th Anniversary of Tunguska

Posted by wingco - 04-07-2008 15:31

The effects were apparently evident in the UK - a number of unseasonably bright evenings.

=====

Re:100th Anniversary of Tunguska

Posted by Furtho - 04-07-2008 15:43

Schlumberger in the Comments section would be right at home on Have Your Say (or indeed Speak You're Brane):

"I have done my research on this topic and also think along with Dr. Beatrice that it was a fight amongst spirits. I have conducted ectoplasmic readings at the site and found them to be very high. The undead rule that place, and it shakes fear into my very marrow."

Crikey.

=====

Re:100th Anniversary of Tunguska

Posted by evilC - 04-07-2008 15:49

Surely that should be in the 'Comets' section?

lthangyew.

=====