
The 2008/9 season \"Where's your money gone\" thread

Posted by Spearmint Rhino - 04-07-2008 15:13

Just put my usual £20 on Liverpool to win the league, at odds of 15/2 (William Hill). Waste of fucking time, I know, cos we feel further away if anything... but Spain came up with the goods so maybe it's the turn of another bunch of relative underachievers in red shirts and Fernando Torres up front.

=====

Re:The 2008/9 season \"Where's your money gone\" thread

Posted by JtS - 04-07-2008 15:34

Arsenal are going to buy Torres?

=====

Re:The 2008/9 season \"Where's your money gone\" thread

Posted by Cavalry Trousers Tips - 04-07-2008 17:32

I'm going to get priced up for an accumulator of us, Lincoln and Ipswich to all get promoted from their respective divisions.

=====

Re:The 2008/9 season \"Where's your money gone\" thread

Posted by Mr Beast - 04-07-2008 17:36

At the other end of the scale I'll be putting money on Colchester to pull off a successive relegation taking into account the new stadium and the fact that they are shite

=====

Re:The 2008/9 season \"Where's your money gone\" thr

Posted by Auntie Beryl - 04-07-2008 19:29

Good shout, SR, it's time to study the form.

As a taster I have placed my normal £2 on Spurs to win the Premiership (slate does not include Man Utd, Chelsea, Liverpool and Arsenal). 5-2, and more tears before bedtime in April.

=====

Re:The 2008/9 season \"Where's your money gone\" thr

Posted by Oldelpaso - 05-07-2008 08:19

Gillingham to get relegated? They currently have Drewe Broughton on trial, a man who in the past three seasons has played for Rushden, Boston and Wrexham...

=====

Re:The 2008/9 season \"Where's your money gone\" thr

Posted by Phoebe - 05-07-2008 17:14

Steal of the season is: A team who have lost their manager in the close season, have their best players wanting to leave, their new manager has never managed as such a high level and is well known for having a shit attitude. On top of that, their backer has pulled out, and their attendances are too low to sustain their current outgoings, and no new signings are on the horizon. They are 12/1 to get relegated - Blackburn Rovers come on down.

At the moment, the other good value is:

Everton are 4/1 with Betfair to be top without the big 4.
Ipswich are 18/1 to be champions and 9/2 to be promoted, which given they have a billionaire backer and have spent over £5m already this year with more to come is suprising.
Southampton relegated from the Championship 3/1.
Walsall relegated from League One 11/5
Bradford 17/2 to be League Two champions and 6/4 to be promoted
Chester 6/5 and Dagenham 5/2 to be relegated
Wrexham 8/1 to be Blue Square champions
Whatever price Oxford are to be relegated must be high - I'm guessing at least 20-1/33-1
AFC Telford 6/1 to win Conference North
Braintree 12/1 to win Conference South

=====
Re: The 2008/9 season \"Where's your money gone\" thread

Posted by boris - 06-07-2008 13:54

Oxford to be relegated? You'll get better odds on Altrincham to be promoted, which is more likely. We've gone all optimistic again over here.

=====
Re: The 2008/9 season \"Where's your money gone\" thread

Posted by Phoebe - 06-07-2008 16:25

Have things changed? Last I heard, you had 13 players, and there where whispers about administration.

=====